THE highly-anticipated month-long celebration of Irish craft is soon set to officially launch.

This year's August Craft Month brings together an array of talented makers hosting over 300 events with representation that is set to include every county on the island of Ireland. August Craft Month celebrates a rich craft heritage with artisans keeping ancient traditions alive and new talented makers bringing real vibrancy to the scene.

With events taking place across Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland, August Craft Month provides unique opportunities for people to get involved as well as supporting makers by buying products and learning more about their work. Led by Design & Crafts Council

Ireland and Craft NI, the annual celebration is once again part of an island-wide summer programme. There is a packed itinerary of over 300 events currently planned, which is continuing to grow, with a whole range of crafts from ceramics to carving, glass to sewing available to be explored.

There is something for everyone, of all ages, and all levels of expertise. This year has seen makers come together to form more established communities and crafting events, as August Craft Month becomes more established.

Rosemary Steen, CEO, Design & Crafts Council Ireland, said, "We are thrilled to once again work with Craft programme of events for 2024 taking part across the whole of Ireland.

"This is the third year we've developed an all-island August Craft Month and we've seen increasing engagement from craft makers across the island, introducing new audiences to ways to take part in the crafts. We're delighted to see over 300 events listed in the programme in 2024. It is a fantastic opportunity for people to take the plunge into the craft world, to see the amazing crafts happening in their local communities and across the country."

Katherine McDonald, Director of Craft NI, added: "August Craft Month is a fantastic platform to honour and acknowledge the skilled makers we have right on these shores.

"This year's programme has shaped up to be one of our best, with a really diverse range of craft disciplines including ceramists, textile makers, glassblowers, designermakers and many more. It's a great opportunity to try a craft for yourself. "Handmade pieces are often one of a kind and make the most thoughtful and considered gift or an excellent way to show self-care." Dr Suzanne Lyle, Head of Visual Arts, Arts Council of Northern Ireland, commented: "The Arts Council of Northern Ireland is delighted to support Craft NI and August Craft Month. "The monthlong celebration is an annual highlight in the arts calendar offering hundreds of events, workshops and exhibitions that shine a spotlight on NI craft and showcasing the work of our talented designer makers. "It is great to see Craft NI continue their collaboration with Design & Crafts Council Ireland, making this an all-island celebration that reaches more people. Well done to all involved!"

For the first time ever, you can use the August Craft Month interactive map on the augustcraftmonth.org website to find the closest events happening in your local community.

'My workshops would be printing, natural dying, block printing...'

A Co Down-based artist is working on carrying on Ireland's linen heritage, as she tells Tara Moyes uth Osborne, professionally known as Ruth Osborne Art, creates various pieces of art all using Irish linen as the base of her work. This comes after developing an interest from her education in art history.

"Tve always done my own print-making and so it was just really an evolution of developing my interest in printmaking but also working in arts education and learning more about the textile heritage that we have in Northern Ireland, particularly in Irish linen," she says.

"That kind of evolved into me now working with more natural materials alongside print and Irish linen.

"Most of what I make is textile artworks that could be framed or be wall hangings or that could be little vessels. I also then do a small selection of reproduction prints and cards which are based on my original textile works."

Belfast in particular has a long history of linen, once being called a Linenopolis in the 19th and 20th centuries. Upholding this heritage through the use of Irish linen has become fundamental in Ruth's work.

"That heritage is really important to why I work with Irish linen, and I think there are so many people with family connecting them, no matter where I go there's someone connecting them to the Irish linen industry. So that sort of sense of heritage and sense of place that linen has is really important to my work." There is the factor of sustainability and being environmentally friendly that is important to Ruth. "In terms of linen as a textile, it's a natural and -In terms of linen as a textile, it's a natural an plant-based material and it's very sustainable and very environmentally friendly in how it's produced.

"All of that's quite important, I want to think in a more sustainable way, and I want to create in a more sustainable way. I only work with linen that I've sourced from Irish guild linen members, so it's about making sure the linen is authentically designated as Irish linen." As well as the artistic factors and benefits of using the material.

"The linen holds colour in print and texture in such an amazing way. Although I do make work with paper and on other fabrics, the linen is where I find that the textures and colours that I want to work with come through in a way which captures my imagination and sort of fulfils what I want to create.

Along with working with the environment and nature, a lot of Ruth's artworks are heavily inspired by nature itself: "I'm mostly inspired by nature and the changing seasons, but I'm not always trying to reflect an exact season. "It might just be a mood or a feeling connec ed with a season or a place, so it doesn't neces sarily have to be a literal interpretation. It can be about separating the small details or trans tions with colours that can come with the sea sons in my work."

She adds: "I try to connect it back to folklore and meaning so I'm quite invested in the sym bolic meaning behind plants and trees, and I bring some of that folklore into how the work should be interpreted.

"I do take a lot of inspiration from locations and don't necessarily create a literal represen tion of a location, but I'll take inspiration from its colours and the landscape to create a piece I'm working more with natural colours, like dyes that I make myself from foraged plants.] feel like it's quite site and land responsive." For Ruth, her most popular item varies from audience to audience, saying that her Irish lir en works that are framed, would be the most popular commission request.

"Although I have made more retail-focused pieces, like Irish linen candle holders, which are very popular when I do artisan craft markets. What's popular sort of depends on the market and whether it's for an exhibition or more retail-focused work.

Ruth has been an independent artist since t beginning, creating her pieces from her hom studio. "All my work is original aside from the greetings cards I reproduce. All the work is made by me as a maker. It's pretty much my c ative process and my research and experime tation that then leads to the final piece, it's nc something I have other people involved with.

Outside of her home studio, Ruth has variou workshops all across Northern Ireland. "I have one strand of workshops that I delive and they'd be well-being-focused.

This year, August Craft Month returns with a packed programme of over 400 events across all corners of the country.

Local Waterford makers such as Siobhán Joyce and Suzan McCreadle will be involved in the celebrations and events.

August Craft Month celebrates a rich craft heritage with artisans keeping ancient traditions alive and new talented makers bringing real vibrancy to the scene. The programme provides opportunities to experience, participate in, support, buy and learn about the local stand-out craft sector.

Locals interested, can join Siobhán Joyce on August 2, for a workshop at Curragh Bay Beach and experience ceramic making outdoors in this special family edition of Cré Wanderings.

The immersive coastal experience is designed for kids aged seven plus and young teens, participating by an adult family member or guardian.

Explore your creativity together as you learn how to make ceramics inspired by the natural surroundings. By the end of the workshop, guests will have handcrafted a unique piece to take home or leave with Siobhán be fired into ceramic and collected later.

Additionally, a four week ceramic handbuilding class for adult beginners and improvers interested in learning how to make a range of ceramics will be available in Lismore this year for those who are interested. During this project block, participants will learn to make a variety of cups and mugs.

They will be using hand-building techniques and add a personal touch to their pieces through decoration.

At the end of the block, four of your favourite pieces will be glazed and fired for you to enjoy at home. In a workshop taking place at the Friendship Café at Coffee House Lane in Waterford City, guests can create symbolic art that represents each participant's personal journey of change and growth, with accommodations for those with limited dexterity.

Each session begins with a guided meditation focused on transformation, encouraging everyone to reflect on their personal journeys and the challenges of change.

Afterward, you'll have the opportunity to journal your thoughts and share them with the group, fostering meaningful family discussions and deeper connections.

By the end of the workshop, guests will have crafted a wound-up butterfly in a matchbox, symbolizing the act of breaking free from constraints and embracing change.

Tuam and Headford creatives host events for Craft Month By Patrick Flaherty

AUGUST Craft Month, a celebration of local craft across Ireland, gets underway next week with free events in Tuam and Headford.

From traditional to contemporary, Craft Month allows people to immerse themselves in the world of craft making and provides a unique opportunity to learn, make, see and buy crafts. There will be 400 events across Ireland, with eight taking place in Galway. including a tour of Tuam artist Karena Ryan's studio and a group craft making workshop hosted by the Headford Lace Project.

Karena Ryan is a multiaward-winning artist, whose creative process merges stitch with knit, paint, print and collage, resulting in a dynamic interaction of textures and techniques.

She has exhibited her work internationally, most recently in the EU Parliament in Brussels, Mayfair in London and as part of the "Straight out of Ireland" showcase in Philadelphia. The studio tour gives visitors a chance to hear Karena speak about her art and the techniques used in her work. City. Tours takes place next Monday August 5, every half hour from 12-3.30pm. P,laces can be booked via karenaryanartist.com.

Elsewhere, the Headford Lace Project are hosting a get together with other craft makers and groups in the area as part of their Crafternoon Tea event. CRAFTERNOON TEA

Shared group craft activities are known to boost mental health and wellbeing. All who attend will benefit by sharing their skill sets, stories and examples of their work. Headford Lace Project will also exhibit a diverse range of handmade lace items from their archive during the event to bring about inspiration, while visitors are encouraged to bring any current textile projects with them to work on. Refreshments will also be available.

Crafternoon Tea takes place in the Anglers Rest Hotel in Headford on Saturday August 18 from 2pm to 4.30pm, with the family friendly event being free of charge. Some of the other Galway highlights during Craft Month include a display showcasing the craft of bodhran making in Roundstone, a wedding crios weaving workshop in Spiddal and an Irish Patchwork Society Exhibition in Galway

For information on all events in Galway, visit augustcraftmonth.org.

Limerick to get crafty for August

by Katie O'Donovan katie@limerickpost.ie

CRAFT Month returns to Limerick across the month of August, with events taking place throughout the city to mark the annual celebration of arts and crafts.

August Craft Month is Ireland's biggest celebration of craft, hosted in conjunction with the Design and Crafts Council and Craft NI.

On August 3 and 4, a pop-up exhibition will be hosted by the members of the Glass Society of Ireland, with two private workshop sessions and an exhibition open to the public, exploring the creative process between the writer and glass artist.

The exhibition takes place in Spacecraft Artists' Studios, Unit 6 in Mungret Court, and is free and open to all.

On Saturdays throughout August, Demo in Our Window will take place at Castletroy Town Centre with one of the BY DESIGN – A Local Story artists hosting a weekly demonstration.

People can visit, watch the makers create, have a chat, ask some questions, and maybe even join in. The event is free and open to all, running from 1.30pm until 3.30pm.

Later in the month. Bring Out Your Lace 2024 will take place at 16 Roches Street, run by Friends of Lace Limerick in collaboration with People's Museum Limerick, inviting members of the public to bring their lace items to be assessed, catalogued, and photographed.

The group will share useful advice about lace preservation and storage. Friends of Lace will also organise a pop-up exhibition with pieces from its members' personal collections.

All events are free and are open to all to attend.

August Craft Month has kicked off nationwide and Laois is hosting two events for the first time, both in Mountmellick. Ethelda Ellis and Laois Quilters will host a FREE event called Upcycling Denim Jeans, in Mountmellick Library, O'Moore Street. It is on Saturday, August 17 from 10am to 2pm. It is a demonstration of how quilted wall hangings and furnishings as well as bags can be made from old denim jeans. Members will bring along old jeans and threads etc. for everyone to use during short workshops and help attendees to hand sew small articles that can be taken home with them. The second event is a FREE Crafternoon Tea at the Museum Studio in the MDA, Irishtown. It is on Wednesday, August 21, 12pm to 5pm. Mountmellick Development Association is hosting the tea to celebrate Mountmellick Embroidery. This event will Include: A selection of museum short films showing throughout the day, including The Museum Welcome, The Culture Night and The Mountmellick Town Trail. #### Key Learnings for Discussion

- Micro release: Going out with a micro release at the beginning of the campaign ensured that we put August Craft Month on the calendar for publications across NI and ROI and could achieve coverage from the longer lead titles.
- Tailored regional releases: Focusing on a release for each county ensured that we got an effective spread of coverage across the island. This was the main driver for coverage for this campaign.
- Maker pitching: Involving our content team allowed us to discover and build out the most newsworthy stories from the makers. This allowed us to really achieve an increase of broadcast coverage for this year.
- Key messages: Our confirmed key messages formed the basis of our briefing documents for broadcast interviews as per previous years. We feel this works well as a guide for speaking notes for the makers, and we can tweak this overall template also.
- Confirming timelines: We know that timings are key for achieving coverage throughout August. While we feel that starting in July allowed to increase coverage during the campaign, we do think a tighter planning at the end of the campaign can ensure we reach every KPI for the campaign.

- PR Photocalls: Both photocalls were key to driving coverage and ensuring that the campaign launch and August launch were very effective in providing a boost of coverage on a national level.
- Thought leadership: We thought that a thought leadership could be really effective as a final push for the campaign, ensuring we met KPIs and driving those final pieces of broadcast coverage. Next year it would be great to have this planned as priority at the end of the campaign to ensure it can go out in a timely manner.
- Broadcast interviews: We began conversations with broadcast media earlier this year and were able to effectively plan some slots in advance. We did achieve an increase from last year, however we did find it difficult to organise a series of interviews on the same station as they couldn't always plan their schedules so far in advance.
- Listicles: The listicles provided an effective push for the last two weeks of the campaign. Similar to previous years, we focused on specific regions across NI and ROI and used this as way to exceed our KPIs.
- Cork Craft Month: We found in our conversations with media that we had the same targets as Cork Craft Month and therefore found that some of our key targets wouldn't accept our content as they had already ran Cork Craft's Months pitch.

Learnings for Next Year's Growth

- Social Media Strategy: For August Craft Month 2025, we recommend exploring what we can build on from a social media and influencer perspective. This would allow a focus on channels beyond traditional PR and ensure more targeting towards specific social audiences.
- Campaign Spokesperson: Working with an ambassador / spokesperson for August Craft Month that has a strong social presence would help to support the wider social media strategy. Someone with a broadcast background would be especially effective for PR pitching for national online and broadcast opportunities.
- The Changing Media Landscape: We know that the media landscape is always changing and, while we can't predict what it will look like next year, we can ensure that August Craft Month is aligned to the content we know that media will look for to reach their audiences. This could be through a focus on video, interviews, etc and we can continue to have conversations with media to ensure all content is fully aligned.
